A Tragedy Expected

The expected has happened in Mexico. It has been idle to put faith either in Carranza promise or Carranza performance. The de facto chief's violation of good faith is shown not less in the lying statements issued to European Powers than in the attack upon American soldiers at Carrizal.

Uncle Sam's show of military strength will have little effect on the mass of Mexicans, inflamed by appeals to ignorance and prejudice. Carranza, Obregon, Gonzales and others of the more intelligent leaders may know that in case of war their country is doomed to defeat, but they have been so long a part of the passions and hatreds of the millions of ignorant men that they cannot now insure the United States, even if they would, against border raids and outrages.

The news given to Honolulu in a Star-Bulletin extra yesterday afternoon would mean, were any other president but Mr. Wilson in the White House, an invincible punitive expedition against Carranza outlaws, as well as against Villa outlaws. What it means with Mr. Wilson in the White House the Star-Bulletin does not assume to predict.

PUNAHOU'S PAGEANT.

Inclement weather failed to spoil either the spirit or the physical effects of the finely-conceived and finely-rendered Punahou pageant yesterday.

All that has been said of the expected impressiveness of the pageant was realized. It ended at a late hour but up to the very end its series of colorful episodes held unwearied interest. The skill, intuitive reproduction of many events which are no more than legends, and poetic character of the spoken words which accompanied no less eloquent tableaux, give this pageant a foremost place in events of its kind created in Hawaii. The pity of it is that one performance should end it. It would probably be impossible to repeat the pageant in its entirety, because of the very large number of participants, many of them very busy men and women; but cannot Punahou arrange for another performance of some of the striking features, perhaps shortly after the opening of school next fall? Or, if not then, at the Mid-Pacific Carnival of 1917?

RECOGNITION FOR ADVERTISING.

Unusual recognition has been given to advertising as a definite factor in modern economies. Herbert S. Houston has been honored with the degree of master of arts from the University of Pennsylvania. He is the president of the Associated Clubs of the World, which hold their convention in the Quaker City next week.

Houston declared that the honor must be shared by the advertising men of the country, for he holds the degree is primarily a recognition of the serious educational work of the advertising club movement.

For ten years, Mr. Houston has been actively connected with the important efforts of the advertising clubs (which represent advertisers, publishers and other advertising interests) to bring about the adoption of more efficient business practices in all lines.

In addition to this recognition of the work of the advertising men of the country, is the fact that the University of Pennsylvania has thrown open its halls to the Associated Advertising Clubs for their annual convention, to be held here next week, beginning Sunday.

Besides his work in the advertising club movement, Mr. Houston, has won renown in connection with his work through the League to Enforce Peace. It was he who originated the idea of using economic pressure as a means to enforce peace.

Advertising is a tremendous factor in modern business. Its potentialities are just beginning to be realized by businessmen in general.

WHY A FAILURE?

Because Denver has abandoned the straight commission form of government, the Advertiser is proclaiming the commission form a failure. This is a good deal like the stock argument against prohibition—that it hasn't worked universally and worked completely. As a matter of fact, the commission government idea is getting more and more popular every day, and because Denver didn't work it successfully is no more argument against the general system than the arrest of blind-piggers and bootleggers in "dry" territory is an argument against prohibition.

Before the charter convention met a number of months ago, the Star-Bulletin wrote to more than a score of representative cities and towns which had adopted the commission or the commission manager plan. A frank statement of their experiences was asked for, and readers of this paper will remember that in not one case was the commission or short-ballot plan designated a failure, whereas in nine-tenths of the cases it was designated a conspicuous success.

Denver's experience, moreover, has resulted in the substitution of a system which has many of the essential points of the short-ballot form. For instance, Denver's new charter provides for the appointment by the mayor of an industrial board of business men whose duties are "to promote the prosperity of the city." Furthermore, the mayor promises a non-partisan government. Evidently the commission plan could not have been such a failure after all!

The Star-Bulletin is not familiar with the "inside" facts of Denver's change but it promises its readers right now an inquiry to get them. They should be illuminating. And while making inquiry, we should like to inquire of our morning contemporary its authority for the declaration that "the commission form does not seem to fill the bill, at least that has been the experience of a good many cities that have tried it, where the pendulum is now swinging back the other way." Honoluluans would appreciate some particulars as to the names of these cities.

KITCHENER—HIS POWER AND LIMITATIONS.

(From the New York World.)

Whether Kitchener could have been another Marlborough in the field he had no chance to prove. He was an organizer and administrator of the first rank. He proved it once in peace as the reformer of Egypt. He proved it thrice in war; the third time by raising, drilling and equipping incomparably the largest volunteer armies of history—a "spiritual achievement" that, as Maximilian Harden says, of it, many will rank higher than the "readiness of every limb of the body politic" in Germany for war.

Kitchener in the early months of the war was as nearly indispensable as mortal can ever be. No lady's man or week-end, but a grim, 100-per cent soldier, he held confidence when confidence was everything. Then a striking contrast pitilessly bared his limitations. The Welsh attorney Lloyd George showed himself more apt in rousing working-men, more willing to depute his power through a vast managing organization; quicker, even, to realize in the munitions matter that the new war was not war as Britain had known it in the past. And Kitchener's star waned.

A CASE FOR INVESTIGATION.

In police court yesterday a soldier charged with driving a motorcycle while under the influence of liquor told the court that his superior officer, a Schofield lieutenant, had on two previous occasions prevented him from coming to police station for his hearing.

This is distinctly a case for investigation, not only by the civil but by the military heads. Whether it is more than a matter of over-officiousness does not appear now, but the county attorney should know clearly if any military authority is preventing a fair trial by civil court of an alleged offender, simply because he is a military man.

The "special privilege" to sell booze has long been the source of trouble in Honolulu but the license commission shows no sign of eliminating the privilege and the trouble. Two or three mild penalties were ordered by the commissioners yesterday and there their disciplinary activities ended. Meanwhile Maui, whose regulation of licenses bids fair to set the pace for the territory, follows public sentiment by cutting down the number of its liquor-resorts by one. One noticeable thing on Maui was the strong protest from a plantation manager against any form of license in the Hana district. It is easy to predict that the time is not far distant when plantation men throughout the territory will be taking the same stand.

A page feature of unusual interest to be published by the Star-Bulletin next Saturday will be "Hawaii at the Chicago Conventions." Joseph R. Farrington, Honolulu boy now a student at the University of Wisconsin, covered the Chicago and St. Louis conventions for the Star-Bulletin and has supplemented his telegraphic news with comprehensive accounts of Hawaii's part in these big national events. The articles are written in a breezy, entertaining style and have the especial interest of telling about "the folks you know."

"The Matsonia is leaving today with a capacity list and there is a waiting list of about 20 for the next sailing, which establishes a record for traffic west-bound at this time of year," writes the San Francisco agent of the Hawaii Promotion Committee. Is Hawaii getting the tourists? Evidently. Are there more tourists to be got? There certainly are. The men who a few years ago used to say that there was nothing in the tourist business for Hawaii are now ashamed of their stupidity.

Mexico's "White Book" has just been issued for the benefit of the European countries, complaining that Uncle Sam is entirely to blame. If the European countries swallowed everything in their own White Books they are liable to take Mexico's plea as gospel truth.

With a large hotel established at the volcano it should only be a question of time until a concrete road is built to the crater. Good roads promote travel and the money could not be better spent—by the territory, it is to be hoped.—Hawaii Herald.

Russia has captured another 175,000 men, according to Petrograd's claims. This is beginning to sound like the first few days of the war, when it was a slow day that did not see the Czar-generals taking at least a hundred thousand prisoners.

If former Secretary Garrison is named to the supreme bench, sitting along with Brandeis, the judicial stand-patters will be shocked beyond expression.

When you wake up in the morning of a chill and cheerless day And feel inclined to grumble, pout or frown. Just glance into your mirror and you will quickly see

It's just because the corners of your mouth turn down. Then take this simple rhyme, Remember it in time: It's always dreary weather, in countryside or town. When you wake and find the corners of your mouth turned down.

If you wake up in the morning full of bright and happy thoughts, And begin to count the blessings in your cup. Then glance into your mirror and you will quickly see

It's all because the corners of your mouth turn up. Then take this little rhyme, Remember all the time: There's joy a-plenty in this world to fill life's silver cup. If you'll only keep the corners of your mouth turned up.

LETTERS

A MISSION WORTH WHILE.

Honolulu, T. H., June 22, 1916.
Editor Honolulu Star-Bulletin:
Sir: Your news article under caption of "Honolulu Men Are Said to Be Seeking Wives," in Tuesday's issue reminds me of what I have intended to do since my arrival here from the mainland. On May 12 last I met the two young men whom you mention in the article, Manuel Gooss and Arthur R. Vierra, at the Homestead Fraternity hall, Boston, of which Adeline Moses Smith is matron. These young men made a very good impression upon the many people present. Mr. Vierra made a splendid talk on the Hawaiian Islands. He spoke of the early struggle of the fathers of the present generations and also of the great work that Hawaii is doing today to Americanize the children of the different races in Hawaii.

The advice given by these young men to the young women was not that they should come here to marry, but that Hawaii offered better opportunities for educated and decent women than the factories and the shops of the big Hub City offered. The young men were somewhat stricken with amazement to learn that so many beautiful girls and young women work so hard in the dark workshops of that city, and because of their surprise they made the statement that Hawaii offered chances for the upright man and woman, and in every case when the woman was worthy there was no difficulty in securing a husband. Hawaii, they said, was noted for the happy home and the exceptional environment suitable for the young women such as were present. The young men, undoubtedly, made a wonderful impression, for they immediately received hundreds of invitations to speak. Their eloquence was not extraordinary, but it lacked the bluffing spirit and misleading stuff which paid lecturers give away. The boys were worthy of being listened to; they evinced the deepest sense of honor and truth. There is no question that they could and can pick out from the virtuous thousands the companions which would make them happy. I would recommend that every young man who hereafter goes away from here to the mainland go prepared with truthful gospel such as these young men want. I am here on a visit and since have been able to perceive the excellent character that prevails among the young men of foreign extraction. God be with them, for the country needs them both in service and in homes!

Sincerely,

HENRY P. HUSTED.

R. J. Campbell White, for 10 years head of the laymen's missionary movement in the United States and Canada, was inaugurated president of Wooster, Ohio, College.
